THE BRITISH A LITTLE DISGRUNTLED, BUT OTHER FOLKS HAPPY.

Even the Natives Seem Pleased With the Affairs Have Taken-The Germa in Hearty Accord With the Americans Little Sympathy for the Former Queen HONOLULU, Feb. 14.-Although provisional troops and United States marines are constantly on guard and every one is ready to assamble at the call of danger, there has been solutely no excitement here since Ministe Stevens took charge. Even the Kynnersley British feeling against the provisional Government, has flattened out. Kynnersley, instead of demanding that his case be made an international one, meekly apologized for his disorderly conduct and admitted that his arrest was properly made. The advisory council of the provisional Government therefore concluded to let the matter drop. This disposes of the only question which could have roused any ill feeling. The English are not pleased by the course of events, but they content themselves with talk about the jingo policy of "old Minister The Germans are heartily in sympathy with the Americans, and they may be counted on to second the efforts of the provisional Government for annexation or a protectorate. There seems to be no sympathy for the Queen, except among the small number of foreigners who derived some advantage from connection with the palace.

The natives apparently care very little what turn affairs take. Their unconcern is one of the most striking features of the situation. A few have intelligence enough to know what the present upheaval means, but the great majority seem content to know that Americans are in charge, for they have been taught to look upon the United States as their best friend.

The only exciting episode since the hoisting of the American flag was the arrival of the steamer Mariposa with the San Francisco newspapers, which contained the first news of the way the revolution was received in America. The favorable comment by the Washington Government and by the generally caused much pleasure and aided materially in strengthening the provisional Government. An amusing feature sayers. They had predicted that the steamer Claudine was sunk on her trip to San Francisco and that when three days out Commissioner Thurston died. The latter prophecy was not unreasonable, as Thurston was a very sick man when he went on board. So a number of Kanakas bought pigs of pecuand the power of the white residents would at all events probably suffice to quelt them.

Leaving the foregoing propositions aside, nothing remains but the restoration of Queen Lilliuokalani, or the Princess Kaiulani backed by an American protectorate or an English one, or amexation to Great Britain pure and simple. These propositions have been and are still being discussed with interest, but action is waiting on the news from Washington. The provisional Government is pursuing the even tenor of its way, and the Advisory Council is holding meetings almost daily. President Dale is an ex-Justice of the Supreme Court, and among the American residents is considered a strong man in the right place. The Government has reached the point where executive sessions are largely dispensed with and to-day an invitation was tendered to the newspaper representatives from the United States to visit the Ministry and attend a meeting of the Advisory Council.

President Dale said that in his opinion the President Dale said that in his opinion the United States Government would proceed with due regard to the different interests in the islands, and that a satisfactory conclusion would be eventually reached.

KAIULANI'S SIDE OF IT.

Mr. T. H. Davies Says the Princess to of Royal Blood and Inherits the Throne. Boston, March 6 .- Mr. Theodore H. Davies. the gentleman who escorted Princess Kajulani from her English school to this country, denied to-day the statement of George Parsons Lothrop in THE SUN this morning that the monarchy of Hawaii is not hereditary, and defended Kaiulani's claim. Mr. Davies said:
"The order of succession to the throne is exactly the same in Hawaii as it is in Eng land. The throne goes to the eldest son of the roigning monarch by inheritance. But several times there has been no son to perpetuate the dynasty. I knew Kamehameha IV. and his Queen Emma. They had one son, Lunalio, but he died. Consequently there was no direct heir. There was a daughter, but she could not inherit, as according to the Constitution, although a queen is capable of reigning, the monarchydoes not descend through the female line. In that case an election was held, and Kalakaua, who came of a collateral line, was chosen. There was no other course, as the monarchial dynasty was extinct, and the last King had not appointed a successor. Kalakaua had no son, and he nominated his sister. Lilluokalani, as his successor. This is as the Constitution provides. Lilluokalani was the legitimate Queen of Hawaii; her title was unquestioned and unquestionable. Queen Lilluokalani, as her successor. The nomination was confirmed and proclaimed by the Legislature in the regular form provided by the Constitution. Her right to the throne on the death of the present Queen is barring the birth of a son to Liliuokalini, as indisputable as that of the Prince of Wales to the throne of England, excepting that the whole system of Government is subverted by a revolution.

"Kaiulani is of royal blood. Although the reigning dynasty was extinct, her under Kalakaua, was of a collateral branch to which she belongs. Mr. Lathrop has made a mistake. He thinks that upon the death of a monarch any one could be elected. But the monarch any one could be elected. But the monarch any one could be elected. But the monarch any one could be lected. But the monarch any one could be cleated. But the monarch and nothing on earth can interfere with it except a revolution. I know Mr. Lathrop well. He has attempted to make a point, but he is q of the roigning monarch by inheritance. But several times there has been no

He talked like a man of 25, and his answers gave evidence of an unusual degree of intelligence. The agent learned that the boy was Gilbert Villepegue, that he was 12 years old, and lived with his mother and stepfather at Amsterdam avenue and Ninety-first street. "Am I obliged to answer that question?"
"You are." said the policeman gravely.
"I'm not under arrest.
"But you are in custody," said the officer.
"Well, I'm not afraid of you, nor any other policeman. Even Superintendent Byrnes can't scars me. I haven't done anything wrong. My name is Gilbert Villepegue. REPEAL THE SHERMAN LAW. J. S. CONOVER & CO.,

SENATOR HILL SAYS IT IS THE FIRST STEP TOWARD BIMETALLISM.

Mr. Gladstone's Speech in Opposition to Free Bimetalite Coinnge Re Says that the "Grand Old Man" is Always Tenchable by Events, but Rarely by Argument. WASHINGTON, March 6.-Senator Hill was asked to-day if the report cabled from London last week of the speeches and the vote in the House of Commons on Tuesday last altered any views expressed in his recent speech in the Senate on the gold and silver question.

"Not a whit," said he. "On the contrary, I am sincerely obliged to Mr. Gladstone for so premptly confirming and sharpening the point of my argument for the repeal of the Sherman law. King Solomon said (and he made no ex-ception of the United States Senate) that 's word fitty spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver.' And now comes the working king, if not the reigning queen, of Great Britain to give my spoken words a fresh and

There is nothing new in the attitude of the British Government or the expressions of Mr. Gladstone, but they come fresh and convinc ing to back up the demonstration of the futility of the conference, and the necessity of action by the United States. Our first act should be the early unconditional repeal of the Sherman law, which blocks our return to free bimetallic coinage with futile silver purchases and a new greenback inflation, both of which are a scandal and a shame.

"Mr. Gladstone's opposition to bimetallism is as notorious as his prophecy a few years ago of disunion for the United States and his resistance of home rule for Ireland, until Irish votes turned him out of power. Mr. Gladstone is teachable by events always, but rarely by argument. If there is anything now in his speech it is that he now undertakes a copious defence of his antiquated opinions, whereas in 1885, he is reported to have said that the in 1885, he is reported to have said that the man or party in England attempting to change her present system would be destroyed. Certainly the stenographic report of Mr. Gladstone's speech last Tuesday will include no stronger expression than that. Certainly, too, no man and no party in Great Britain has yet run the alleged hazard of self-destruction on that issue. It is just because Great Britain, as represented by the leaders of the Tory party, who incline toward cooperation with the United States in free bimetailic coinage, and by the leaders of the Liberal party, who incline against it, does not now see sufficient reason to change; and it is just because the cooperation of Great Britain in the resumption of tree bimetallic coinage is deemed by every European power a condition sine qua non of their participation, that all competent and disinterested bimetallists in the United States so earnestly desire the immediate unconditional repeal of the Sherman law.

"There are domestic reasons for repeal, all sufficient, heaven knows, and the steady extension of gold is teaching that leason daily, even to the deaf, dumb, and blind. There are minernational reasons for repeal of the Sherman law, too, and Mr. Gladstone lights them up for us with a Bengal fire. I say Bengal fire because the ropeal of the Sherman law, too, and wh. Gladstone lights them of the United States will make the gold and silver question for Great Britain a question of the peace, if not the preservation, of her Indian empire. Let the Sherman law be repealed, and I doubt if Mr. Gladstone will need more than one short month to ascertain whether the British Government can get man or party in England attempting to change will need more than one snort month to ascertain whether the Firitish Government can get on giving the gold in London free coinage into full legal-tender money, and giving to silver money, without giving to the two free coinages a legal correlation. Face to face with a repeal of the Sherman law, it should not take Mr. Gladstone, even in his great age, one month to open negotiations troubles.

Led by the Democrats of New York and the joint resolution of the two National Conventions 10,000,000 ballots were cast last November in favor of going straight to that goal. Good men will differ about the route, but my judgment is clear that the first right step is the square repeal of the Sherman law—that and that only."

WASHINGTON, March 6. - Secretary Foster of he Treasury Department this afternoon received a telegram from Assistant Treasurer Roberts at New York saying that $2,075,000 in gold had been taken from the Sub-Treasury to-day for export to-morrow. United States notes and Treasury notes were paid for the gold. In addition to the gold taken from the Sub-Treasury. $25,000 in gold was taken from banks for export. This large export will leave the United States Treasury with a little less than $2,000,000 gold, the lowest point it has reached since the passage of the act for the resumption of specie payments.

Application was made yesterday to Judge Osborne in the City Court for a cousel fee. Mrs. Buchanan desired the Court to understand that she did not want any alimony, preferring to work for her own living than to be in any way dependent upon her husband for support. The couple were married over twelve years ago, and although their troubles began soon after their marriage, the linal separation did not take place until the beginning of the present year. Two co-respondents are named in the complaint, one designated as "Louise" and the other as Emily Miller, and it is alleged that the defendant and the latter lived together for several years as Mr. and Mrs. Nelson and had three children. MR. WHEELER AND MISS M'BRIDE

The Loving Couple Are Forced to Leave Smith & McNell's Hotel. Mr. Monroe Wheeler and Miss Kittle Mc-Bride, his wife's servant, were quietly requested to leave Smith & McNell's Hotel at 198 Greenwich street, yesterday morning. They left arm in arm, smiling and happy.

This is the Monroe Wheeler who left his wife in Nutley, N. J., a week ago, in order to live with Miss McBride. He did not exactly leave with Miss McBride. He did not exactly leave her of his own accord. Mrs. Wheeler, after listening to his confession of affection for the servant, told him to clear out. The servant in-sisted on following him.

The couple came to this city and registered at Smith & McNell's Hotel as "Monroe Wheeler and wife, Nutley, N. J." They ob-tained good rooms and spent plenty of money. They were looked upon as a newly married couple, come to town for their honeymoon. Upon reading the stories printed in yesterday's newspapers of Mrs. Wheeler's intention to obtain a divorce, the manager of the hotel, after satisfying himself as to the identity of the two guests, asked them to leave the hotel. Mr. Wheeler took the matter very cheerfully, and did not seem to be disconcerted by the smiles of the guesta who watched him pass through the office. He did not say where he intended going.

It is probable that seven other Cabinet officers will take the prescribed oath at the State Department between 10 and 11 A. M. to morrow. The oath-taking will be accompanied by more ceremony than has been customary, and it is said that the method to be pursued to morrow is without precedent, as it has been the custom for newly appointed Cabinet officers to be sworn in at their respective departments in a manner devoid of formality. Pennsylvania avenue from all parts of the city. It was with great difficulty that the cable cars and vehicles were able to move. Nine electric suns, placed on stands tweive feet high in front of the Capitol. Illuminated that building. The effect was fine, and the structure was visible many miles away. The lighting of the avenue was effected by forty union illuminators, and these, supplemented by revolving suns at the Treasury Department, completed a scene the brilliancy of which was a subject of much admiration.

But the best entertainment of the evening was the pyrotechnic display in the Monument grounds, where for about an hour the crowds were treated to a perfect fusillade of explosives, following each other in rapid succession and including all the numerous devices known to the art. There were half a dozen or more set figures in the display, chief of which were the following: George Washington, equestrain statue, forty by forty feet size; Andrew Jackson, equestrain statue of similar size, and Columbia. There were two others, however, that created more than the usual amount of applause and enthusiasm. These were devices with the portraits of Harrison and Morton and Cloveland and Stevenson, the latter of which bore the motto: "Public Office Is a Public Trust."

"It is untrue and outrageous." Mr. Dunham said yesterday.

It is not difficult to guess how the gossips came to start the story. Not only are Miss Dunham and her sisters musicians of more than amateur ability, but when Paderewski first came to this country, two years ago, he brought letters from the English artist. Alma Tadema to Mr. Dunham, and since that time has been an intimate visitor in Mr. Dunham's house. The Misses Dunham have, natturally, attended many of the Paderewski recitals.

Reene as Richard III.

Mr. Thomas W. Keene made his first appearance in New York for three years last night at the Union Square Theatre, and chose Bichard III.as the character for the occasion. When Mr. Reene was last here Booth and Barrett were in the public's eye and their names upon the stage, and one from life, and Shakespeare finds solitary American male exponent of pretension in Mr. Keens.

Mr. Keene's position in the theatrical world has been defined by two circumstances, which are not matters of opinion, but matters of fact. One is that his style is of the time and method of Edwin Forrest rather than of the time and method of Edwin Booth. The second is that his vogue is in the wide and some what wild West rather than in the cultivated and possibly effete East. Given these data lovers of Shakespeare and those familiar with the Shakespearean drama on the stage scarcely need further definition of this actor's reatment of the great heroes of tragedy. Several years ago, when Mr. Keene played were observed with interest by theatergoers who found much to admire in his sturdiness and directness of interpretation, and much to condemn in his lack or neglect of the scholarly view of delicate portrayal of the rôles he assumed which the leading tragedians of the world had taught us to appreciate. He gave us no new light, he added nothing to the brilliancy of the modern stage, but he showed himself at least the equal of Barry Sullivan, and he aroused attention and admiration, in his own way, as the British actor used to.

Mr. Keene has made no advance in his art since that time. The misfortune—it is rot a fault—under which he labors is that he is not a scholar. He has the pronounced mannerisms of Lawrence Barrett without the latter's magnetic power. Barrett forced his most ceasorious critic to admit that he could take and hold the stage alone, despite the faults which marred almost every line in its deliverance. This Mr. Keene cannot do. His reading at times is abominable, especially in soliloquy; and Richard abounds in soliloquy.

The lover of Shakespeare to-day demands of the interpreter supreme intelligence, and repudlates the so-called "old school," with fis undue emphasis and its baid appeal to the galleries. It demands the subtle rendering of a Booth, and pronounced eccentricity must be accompanied at least by the genius of an Irving. Hence it is that Mr. Keene cannot hope to win and wear the mantle at which he has won by a generation of hard and conscientious endeavor; or to judge him as a Shakesperian actor by his rendition of one character. He proposes to give New York next week a more elaborate test of his quality, by a round of characters, and in one of these at least he he may reach higher than in "Richard"

Of Mr. Keene's support especial mention should be made of Mr. Frederick Paulding's King Henry Vh., which is marked by intelligent study and careful reading. Indeed, it is a matter of regret that King Henry should be forced by the text to die so early in the evening. The Lady Anne of Miss Maida Craigon is also a very acceptable rendition, and Miss Henrietta Vader's Elizabeth is and directness of interpretation, and much to condemn in his lack or

The project of their making professionals contribute to the Actors' Fund was discussed at the meeting of the city managers a few weeks ago and was favorably regarded by many of them. Manager Palmer volunteered to make the first trial. He said yesterday: "This scheme is not a new one, although a novelty here. It has long been carried on successfully in Germany. It seems to me that nobody in the profession will object to the payment of the fee."

It is likely that the Bljou and Fourteenth Street theatres will follow the example set by Mr. Palmer. The theatre treasurers are pleased with the idea, for it will save them the annoyance of receiving applications for free seats on the day or night of a performance. annoyance of receiving amplications for free seats on the day or night of a performance. Under the new rule amplication for complimentaries must be made in advance to the theatre manager. He fills out and signs the blank, and gives it to the treasurer, who delivers the ticket on the payment of the fee.

INVITED TO THE WORLD'S FAIR. President Cleveland Requested to Participate

WASHINGTON, March 6.-President Cleveland's first official invitation was extended to him this afternoon. It came from the World's Fair Commissioners and Directors, and was presented, according to previous engagement, in the Cabinet room at 1 o'clock. President Cleveland received the party in the Cabinet room. He was attired in a pepper-and-salt suit, with a frock coat, and appeared none the worse for his exposure of Saturday Introductions were made by ex-Senator T. H. Palmer, Chairman of the Columbian Exposition Commissioners. After all the gentlemen tion Commissioners. After all the gentlemen had been greeted (many of whom were old acquaintances of the President) Mr. Widener addressed the Iresident, who stood at the head of the table with his hands on his hips in an attitude of earnest attention.

President Cleveland's response was entirely informal, and consisted mainly of questions as to the length of the programme and the time it would be necessary for him to remain in Chicage to perform what was expected of him. "If I go," he said." It will be because I deem it a public dury which I ought to discharge. At that time, as you, gentlemen, are doubtless aware, there will be many matters of public importance to demand my presence here." President Cleveland said he would consider

SOROSIS ELECTS OFFICERS.

How Women Vote-The President Congrat-ulates the Club on Its Progress.

Once each year the women of Sorosis exercise the high prerogative of suffrage at their regular annual election, which falls always on the first Monday in March. Very tenacious are these spirited ladies of their privileges, and when nce, twice, even thrice the vote is cast for a candidate resulting each time in a tie it is difficult to find a woman in the ranks willing to yield her vote for the sake of breaking the the famous club, which now approaches its twenty-fifth anniversary, was very harmonious and orderly. Of course, for every woman that was elected another woman was defeated, and women take defeats pretty seriously; so there nets, and faces weary and flushed with excite-

A woman's election is about as much like the affairs conducted by men as a Bowery free-lunch place with a balze door resembles the perfumed daintiness of a lady's boudoir. The women go to it in their best things bright and business meeting, where the tellers are appointed for the day and all the details of the delicate invalid with gratifying and unfailing success. They have friends in every quarter of the civilized world. People in every walk, of life believe in them, use them, and recommend them. In a word, they are the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies of modern times. Sale greater than the combined sales of all other blood and skin remedies. THE DEMOCRATIC FIGHT IN ALBANT.

Mayor Manning Has Election Officers Sworn in Who Were Rejected by the Board, ALBANY, March 6 .- On Saturday the three Commissioners of Election of this city, who are Mayor Manning, President Armatage of the Common Council, and Clifford D. Gregory, the Republican member of the Board, met to select Mayor Manning presented a Democratic list of inspectors and clerks for the Board's approval. and Mr. Armatage also presented a Democratic list. The latter list was supported by Mr.

Gregory and Mr. Armatage and declared adopted. Mr. Armstage is a Democrat who is opposed to the local Demogratic organization. and therefore at variance with the Mayor.
This morning the inspectors and elerks named in the list submitted by Mr. Manning were sworn in by Chief of Police Willard.
Judge Fursman has granted an order re-Judge Fursman has granted an order returnable before him in Troy at 4 o'clock this atternoon, for Mayor Manning to show cause why a mandamus should not be issued directing him to cause the list of inspectors and clerks which was submitted by Mr. Armatage to be published in the official papers. On Saturday evening in the Eccump Post and this morning in the Argus, two of the official city papers. Mayor Manning caused the list of Democratic inspectors and clerks which was submitted by him to be published as the official list. Judge Fursman heard arguments on his order and reserved his decision until 5 P. M. to-morrow.

MAINE GETTING IN LINE.

Portland Elects a Democrat for Mayor and Divides the City Council,

PORTLAND, Me., March 6.-Great excitement prevails here to-night over the city election. The returns show that the vote for Mayor is as follows: Ingraham, Democrat, 4,302: Baxter, Republican, 4.125: True, Prohibitionist, 48. It is claimed that in ward One there was either fraud or a mistake. This has always been an evenly divided ward, but the returns show a Democratic majority of 275, and the whole Democratic majority of 275, and the whole number of ballots returned exceed the number of names checked on the list by about 100. The warden burned the ballots as soon as they were counted, and great indignation is expressed at his action.

The City Council is in doubt. The Republicans elect 13, the Democrats 12, and in ward Three there is no choice for Alderman and two Councilmen.

Deering elects John E. Sawyer, Democrat for Mayor, by twenty-four majority over W. W. Merrill, liepublicans. The Board of Aldermen stands five Republicans, two Democrats.

Westbrook elects A. H. Cordwell, Republican, for Mayor, by 33 majority over 4. C. Scales, Democrat. The City Council is 7 Republicans and 6 Democrats.

A Locomotive Brenks an Axle, HARTFORD, March & The engineer of the morning train from Winsted, on the Philadelphia, Rending and New England road, which reaches here at 8:20 o'clock, when he stopped reaches here at 8:20 o clock, when he stopped at Bloomfield found the rear axis of his engine broken and the rear driving wheel off. The right forward driving wheel was broken at the nake and slightly turned under the engine. The first break was a clean, new fracture, but the other was an old fracture, as shown on examination. The road abounds in dangerous enries, grades, and declivities, and it is astonishing that no disaster occurred.
